1. You can pick MAP to find someone else's ride/track

2. You can pick SEARCH to find someone else's ride/track two different ways.

You can SEARCH if you know the person that made the ride/track

You can also SEARCH for all the trips/ride/track related to a trail system

I personally use the SEARCH for a TRIP/ride/track more than anything else. (Only if I know the person I will SEARCH for the person.)

Type in name of a trail system.
For example: Elk Hill

You will get all the trips/rides/tracks with Elk Hill in it... You will even get other trips too.

Click on Hand Lens

One example is Elkins Creek in Ohio and another is from Elk Hill, Michigan

3. You can also FILTER for all the trips/ride/track related to a trail system

When you FILTER, you will get all the trips in the recent section (All around the world) This is not necessarily the best way to find a trip.

Example of How to Download a trip/ride/track using SEARCH:

Final Thoughts

Pros:

- It's FREE
- I rarely has stopped. (Not recently)
- You don't need to have internet
- Can reuse your own TRACKS
- There is a website o visit to get your tracks to verify (Top Trail)
- If it "stops working" never fear, it does remember your trail when you are in satellite range.
- You can put multiple tracks on your MAP at one time. This helps you see all the trails offered for the trail system.
- Most consistent tracking app I've used
- You don't have to pause this app. I will pause itself and then start again, on its own.

Cons

- It has stopped
- You MUST download TRACKS before you leave to go to your trail system to be able to use other people's tracks.

Personal Experience:

This is my Go-To App for tracking. I've taken it out West, all over Michigan plus other states: Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Wisconsin, etc

I have run Ramblr alongside other apps and I've had great success. Very consistent and easy to use.
